INTRODUCTION

Dear friends,

On behalf of Spanish Cooperative Group for the Treatment of Digestive Tumors (TTD) (TTD), we are pleased to invite you to attend the XXXI International Symposium of our group, which will take place in Córdoba from December 13th to 15th of this year. As in all previous editions, the desire of our organizing committee is for the event to be a meeting point and reference for all oncology specialists and other professionals involved in the research and treatment of digestive tumors.

As usual in our events, we will have the participation of prominent national and international specialists who will share their expertise and present the latest data related to advances in digestive tumor research. The program we have developed follows the usual structure of our symposia, with sessions dedicated to hepatobiliary-pancreatic tumors, gastroesophageal tumors, immunotherapy and the traditional sessions dedicated to colorectal cancer on the last day. Additionally, in this edition we will dedicate a space to learn about the situation of collaborative academic research in Europe, with representatives from groups in several European countries, and we will encourage debate with the presentation of two clinical cases and the different approaches for their multidisciplinary treatment, in which we hope to count on your active participation.

With the aim of continuing to provide a space for participation for our residents, we will hold the 11th edition of the Clinical Cases Contest, which allows for the exchange of different experiences among different centers.

Thank you very much in advance for your presence, and it will be an honor for us to welcome you to Córdoba and have your active participation, which will undoubtedly contribute to increasing the educational value of the symposium.
